

PREFACE

Our editorial team is pleased to announce the first issue of the Global Journal of Strategies and Governance: ISSN 1923-6042. To succeed, it took tillage, finding sowers and meeting with open hands to give birth to this review: a journal, apolitical and independent of any organization, which aims to create a space to promote thinking on the major strategic and governance issues among others. We sincerely thank all who have encouraged and supported in this initiative. In this case, we would like to thank the Advisory Board members who agreed to sponsor the review and members of the Scientific Council for agreeing to put their expertise at our disposal. Our gratitude is also addressed to the many anonymous reviewers who have devoted and will devote their time to give their opinion on the scientific contribution of manuscripts received.

We trust that the Global Journal of Strategies and Governance is not just another review; it will fill a real need. Also, the magazine intends to endorse the rigorous selection of articles published since it aims to become the medium and long term, a major player in the field of reflection on the contemporary challenges. In that regard by the democratization of knowledge, one of its creeds, the magazine has chosen exclusively electronic format as a model for dissemination of its articles. This choice is understandable when one highlights the new developments in university libraries and the increasing complexity of their nature and growing environment.

Through inter-and multidisciplinary character, the journal aims, firstly, to address Strategies and Governance problems from different angles, and secondly, to encourage dialogue between scholars of different disciplines. This approach is in itself a challenge, given the increasing specialization of disciplines. The bet will be to maintain a language facilitating communication between players from different backgrounds. Authors are encouraged to use a simple and direct style that emphasizes the logic of the argument. We plan to publish four regular issues a year as well as special issues edited by guest editors who cover communications made in various seminars and conferences. We strongly hope that the articles published through this channel will contribute to a better understanding of contemporary strategic and governance issues. Finally, we invite all researchers interested in these issues to appropriate space for the dissemination of their work.
